Training Course Overview

When did you last think about thinking? It's true that we all do it instinctively and there is a common understanding that we will self-acquire these skills from our own experiences. This situation may be greatly enhanced by taking time to study thinking skills. Widening our approach will help to avoid being constrained by 'status quo' thinking patterns. Sometimes, when working under pressure, there seems little time to apply thinking before we must act. This Anderson training course will introduce techniques for thinking creatively as well as critically and to be able to make decisions with clarity when faced with challenging situations.

Training Course Objectives

By attending this Anderson training course, you will be able to apply a range of thinking techniques, have developed the skills to lead with clarity and make better decisions, more specifically:

- Apply tools to critically evaluate alternatives in a problem-solving process
- Engage teams effectively in the thinking process to achieve results faster
- Utilise visualisation techniques to expand horizons in defining the causes of problems
- Realise conclusions which are soundly underpinned by a thinking process
- Identify potential risks which may result from the decision-making process
