Training Course Overview

Do you realise that 26% of the available worldwide work force are under 22 and will be available for work in 2020? That there will at the same time be a worldwide scarcity of talented people? Most existing development strategies are not equipped for generation Z nor are they suitable for developing internal talented people.

This practical and unique Anderson training course will show you what is needed and most importantly how to do it. Many of the case studies used in this program are current and are very relevant to today's changing world. As always development and training costs are always under scrutiny, delegates will learn how to do evaluation including that which takes up 95% of budget costs – competency-based training.

Training Course Objectives

By attending this Anderson training course, delegates will be able to:

- Radically re think how development need to change to maximise generation Z often referred to as iGen
